[Your Name]: Thank you so much for taking the time to talk to me today, Marie. I'm a big fan of your work, and I'm so excited to read your new book.

Marie Kondo: Thank you so much for having me. I'm so glad to hear that you're a fan of my work.

[Your Name]: Your new book is called Talking Dirty Laundry With The Queen Of Clean. Can you tell me a little bit about what it's about?

Marie Kondo: In my new book, I talk about my own struggles with clutter and how I overcame them. I also share my secrets for decluttering your life and finding joy in the process. I hope that my book will help people to make their lives more peaceful and fulfilling.

[Your Name]: What are some of the biggest challenges that people face when it comes to decluttering?

Marie Kondo: I think the biggest challenge is getting started. It can be overwhelming to look at a pile of clutter and not know where to begin. My advice is to start small. Choose one category of items, such as clothes or books, and focus on that. Once you've decluttered one category, you'll start to feel more motivated to continue.

[Your Name]: Your KonMari method has become a global phenomenon. What do you think is the secret to its success?

Marie Kondo: I think the secret to the success of the KonMari method is that it's based on the idea of sparking joy. When you declutter your home, you're not just getting rid of stuff. You're making space for the things that you love. And when you surround yourself with things that you love, you'll start to feel happier and more fulfilled.

[Your Name]: What are your hopes for the future of tidying up?

Marie Kondo: I hope that more and more people will adopt the KonMari method and experience the life-changing benefits of tidying up. I also hope that tidying up will become a global movement that will help to create a more peaceful and sustainable world.

[Your Name]: Thank you so much for your time, Marie. I'm so grateful for your work.

Marie Kondo: Thank you so much for having me.
